

Activist and founder of the NAMES Project AIDS Memorial Quilt

Cleve Jones seeks to promote a greater national understanding of the devastating effects the AIDS epidemic is having on victim's friends, families, and countless communities across America. Jones offers an enlightening and heart-felt presentation on the long-ranging social impacts of this epidemic. His is the author of Stitching a Revolution—The Making of an Activist.

Today the Quilt is a powerful visual reminder of the AIDS pandemic. Over 42,960 individual 3-by-6-foot memorial panels — each one commemorating the life of someone who has died of AIDS — have been sewn together by friends, lovers and family members. The NAMES Project Foundation coordinates displays of portions of The Quilt worldwide.

“This moving account of the Quilt which united a nation against prejudice, in grief, and for survival, should be required reading for all those too young to remember or too old to want to.”
