

Dan Savage is the editor of The Stranger, Seattle's alternative newsweekly, and the award-winning author of Skipping Toward Gomorrah (Lambda Literary Award), The Kid (Pen-West Award), and Savage Love, a collection of his sex advice columns. His work has appeared on the op-ed pages of The New York Times, in the New York Times Magazine, Travel & Leisure, Rolling Stone, Nest, Salon, and other publications. He lives in Seattle with his boyfriend and their six-year-old son.

Savage Love Live

Dan Savage is best known for his Q&A format sex advice column and he models his live appearances after his column -- he prepares some brief remarks, and then quickly moves on to a lively and often hilarious Q&A session. Audience members are invited to ask their questions live or, if they're too embarrassed, to submit their questions on cards provided on-site. With the audience driving the discussion, the program can touch on any subject -- from sexual problems to gay marriage to child raising to sex education to the current political scene.
